G. Main or Regular Place of Work

"Main or regular place of work" means the principal place of business for the County employee or the principal location to which the County volunteer is assigned to work for the County. This may be the place at which s/he spends the largest portion of his/her regular County workday or working time or, in the case of field workers, the assigned location/headquarters to which s/he returns upon completion of regular or special assignments.

H. Temporary Work Location

"Temporary work location" means the place where the County employee or volunteer is assigned on an irregular or short-term basis, generally a matter of days or weeks. County travelers attending conferences, meeting or training sessions away from the main or regular place of work or field workers conducting field work at off—site locations does not normally constitute assignment to another site.

IV. Authorization to Travel

B. In-County Travel

County employees are authorized to travel within the County when said travel is required by the department and considered a part of the routine, day-to-day official duties of the employee as defined and authorized by the department head or his/her designee. All other in-County travel requires advance authorization by the department head or his/her designee.

V. Travel Expenses

A. General Conditions

- County travelers are entitled to submit a claim for actual and necessary expenses for transportation, meals, lodging, and incidentals for authorized travel, subject to the conditions set forth in this travel policy, whenever the expenses are incurred as part of his/her official duties and authorized because the County traveler is required to:
 - a. work excessively long hours away from main or regular place of work; or

- work at a project location sufficiently distant from main or regular place of work to require overnight lodging;
- attend a meeting in the performance of his/her official duties in which a meal is served; or
- d. travel on very limited notification; or
- e. attend a school, training, convention, or meeting.
- Notwithstanding Section 1 above, claims shall be paid subject to the rules set forth in this policy and statutory law. Eligibility to submit a claim does not automatically entitle the claimant to reimbursement for any and all expenses.

B. Transportation Expenses

- 2. Vehicle Transportation
 - . . .
 - a) Private Vehicle
 - (4) County employee mileage to the regular or main place of work from home, and back, is considered commuting and may not be claimed.
 - (5) County employee mileage to the temporary work location from home, and back, is considered commuting and may not be claimed except in the following cases:
 - (a) if the County employee is required to report to the regular or main place of work before reporting to the temporary work location, s/he is eligible for mileage from the regular or main place of work to the temporary work location;
 - (b) if the County employee is required to report to the regular or main place of work after working at the temporary work location and before going home, s/he is eligible for mileage from the temporary work location to the regular or main place of work.

D. FACTS

Grievant has been employed by the Employer as a deputy for fifteen years, and a bailiff for 11 years. A bailiff is selected by a unique procedure, and may be dismissed at will by the assigned judge. Grievant has been the bailiff for Judge Gary Meyer for eight years. When assigned to a judge, the bailiff remains with that judge in whatever court the judge is assigned to sit. Following that practice, Grievant first worked in Monterey with Judge Meyer, then she worked in Salinas with him.

The King City courts, at one time, operated five days per week. Due to budget constraints, the court schedule was reduced to three days per week, and no trials are held there. From December 2003 until July 2005, Judge Meyer was assigned to sit at the King City courthouse on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. On Monday and Friday, Judge Meyer was assigned to sit at the Salinas courthouse. This was apparently the result of a regular rotation of judges to the various courts in the County. As Judge Meyer's bailiff, Grievant was given the same schedule.

Shortly after beginning this schedule, Grievant raised the issue of mileage reimbursement and travel time with her commander.¹ This matter was pursued informally for some time, and a grievance was filed on April 12, 2004. The grievance was discussed and pursued through the grievance procedure, and on September 8, 2004, the Union appealed the grievance to arbitration. The arbitration hearing was held on July 14, 2005.

¹ UN EX 1, pp 12-15, a January 9, 2004 memo from Grievant to Commander McLaughlin

Grievant's practice while working as a bailiff has been to store her uniform shirt, her gun and other required uniform gear in a locker provided to her at the courthouse. She travels to and from work wearing her uniform boots and her uniform pants, but otherwise dressed in civilian clothes. This is allowed by policy. A deputy is also allowed to carry his or her gear in the trunk of the car, and to store it at home.

In adjusting to the work schedule of Monday-Friday in Salinas and Tuesday-Wednesday-Thursday in King City, Grievant testified:

Monday morning I would start out in Salinas and so at the end of the day I would leave my duty belt, my gun, my shirt, in the locker. Tuesday morning, instead of going directly from my home to King City, I'd go to Salinas to the locker, pickup my duty belt, my gun, my shirt, my vest, and transport all of the equipment to King City. And at the end of the day, I would have to wear that home, bring it home, or drop it in the locker. I'd prefer to drop it in the locker in Salinas.²

Asked why she preferred to leave her gear in her locker, Grievant testified:

Because I have a toddler child and it doesn't need to be around him.³

She later was given access to a locker in King City, so on Tuesday and Wednesday evening, since she would be returning to King City the following day, she stored her gear in her King City locker.

Deputy District Attorneys and Public Defenders who work in Salinas also are expected to travel to King City. The district attorneys are provided a county vehicle to drive and the Union claims that public defenders receive mileage reimbursement. These county employees are not in the same bargaining unit as Grievant. Also, they are considered professional employees, so do not receive overtime compensation.

² TR, p. 13:7-15

³ TR 13:17-18. Grievant is married to Doug Dahmen, an Investigative Sergeant employed by the employer. Sergeant Dahmen has several weapons, and keeps some of them at the couple's home, in a gun safe.

⁵ TR 52:23-25, 53:1-22

⁴ TR 14:22

Doug Dahmen, an Investigative Sergeant employed by the Employer, was President of the local from 1998 to 2003. He was involved in the resolution of grievances during that time. Dahmen testified that he was told by Deputy Stewart that during the time he served as bailiff for a County Commissioner, he was "reimbursed for his mileage" for his travel between courthouses. Dahmen described his understanding further:

- Q. Well, let's take the Marina to King City example. Do you know whether that was something that occurred in the fashion where he would report to King City first thing in the morning for Court, or whether Court would be held in Marina in the morning and then he would move to King City for an afternoon court session?
- A. I don't recall the specifics. I was led to believe that he had a single station that he reported at and that he traveled from that location, is what was reimbursable.
- Q. In other words, if he moved Court locations during the work day, after Court had already been convened for some time in one location, he moved to another location, he got mileage for that, didn't he?
- A. He might very well, yes.
- Q. And that's the situation you re talking about when you say Deputy Stewart received mileage for his travel, correct?
- A No, I believe the situation I'm talking about was that if he reported somewhere else other than Marina, he was getting compensated for mileage. I don't know all the particulars as to how and why. I know that sometimes they were able to take vehicles belonging to the Sheriffs Department if one is available, and other times they don't have vehicles available.⁵

Dahmen also testified that at one point Stewart stopped receiving mileage reimbursement, but Stewart did not file a grievance so the Union did not pursue the issue. Burt Liebersbach, Chief Deputy of the Custody Operations Bureau, testified that

1 Stewart was allowed use of a county vehicle for travel between courthouses when he 2 was expected to perform this travel during his workday. Liebersbach further testified 3 that since Stewart now reports to one courthouse some days of the week and to another 4 courthouse other days of the week, and is not changing courthouses during the day, he 5 is not provided a vehicle.

Dahmen testified that the Union did pursue a grievance concerning the Special Enforcement Unit. He testified that the unit has deputies assigned to Monterey and to Salinas; that the deputies were being assigned on a daily basis to travel from Monterey to Salinas, or Salinas to Monterey, as a case developed; that the deputies were denied travel time for these changes; and that the grievance was resolved by the department agreeing that the deputies would be assigned to one station which would be considered the primary station and if the deputies were directed to travel to the other station they would be paid travel time. Further detailing the situation, Dahmen testified:

- Okay. Question for you, how many days notice were they given of the need to, for example, be at the King City Faire for gang enforcement detail?
- Α. Well, each situation varied, sometimes they were given several days notice, sometimes it was a spontaneous event, depending on the circumstances.
- Q. So, you don't know whether or not they were given the contractually required ten days notice?
- Α. Well, if it had been given a ten day notice and all of their equipment had been relocated to that location and they were able to go to that location and dress in their equipment, then there would have been no basis for the grievance. My recollection is that those things were not done, so they had to literally prepare themselves at their host station and then travel to whatever venue it was, in your example the King City Faire, and that they were declined travel time from point A to point B. That was the nature of the grievance.⁶

Dahmen also testified about the AT&T grievance, and stated that deputies who were assigned to work the golf tournament were not paid for all time spent in traveling to and from that assignment; that the grievance was resolved by the employer agreeing to pay deputies for all time spent in traveling from their home station to the tournament. UN EX 10, consisting of two pages, is the original written grievance and the grievance settlement.

Chuck Monarque, Captain of the Enforcement Operations Bureau, testified that he was involved in the AT&T grievance, while serving in Internal Affairs. Monarque testified that the Employer settled the grievance based upon verification that the time claimed by the deputies was in fact worked by them.

The parties stipulated that if Sue McCall, Finance Manager for the District Attorneys Office, were called and testified, she would testify that District Attorneys who are assigned to Salinas but must travel to King City for court appearances are required to report to the Salinas office to obtain files and other materials for court. She would further testify that they are then assigned a county vehicle to use for travel to King City.

E. POSITION OF THE UNION

Grievant's travel to King City was in furtherance of Employer business and not part of her regular commute. Therefore she should be reimbursed time and mileage. PP & PR Section A.18 is the basic rule which applies here, and provides for this payment when an employee travels "...outside his/her duty station..." and this includes "...special departmental assignments..." Though this policy does exclude the employee's commute, Grievant's travel was not a commute.

Under the Employer's policy, and employee may have only one main or regular place of work. This is defined as the "...principal place of business for the County employee." Past practice also supports this. A previous grievance resolution supports the argument that deputies can have only one main place of duty. The Employer's responses in this grievance establish that Grievant had a "split duty" assignment, working for two days per week in Salinas, and three days per week in King City.

Grievant's main place of duty was Salinas. King City was a satellite courthouse. No trials are held there, the support staff is limited, and the court is open only three days per week. Grievant's payroll came out of Salinas. Her interoffice mail goes to Salinas. The Employer considers other employees, the attorneys in the District Attorney's office and the Public Defender's office, to be based in Salinas, though they also travel to King City as did Grievant.

Since Grievant's primary place of business is Salinas, her travel to King City was not a commute.

The attorneys in the District Attorney's office and the Public Defender's office do receive some sort of reimbursement for travel to King City; the district attorneys are provided cars to drive to King City, and the Public Defenders receive mileage reimbursement. There is only one Employer travel policy, and to distinguish between Grievant and these other employees is not defensible.

In other situations (Deputy Stewart and his commissioner, the AT&T golf tournament) the employer has also recognized its responsibility to provide time and mileage reimbursement in circumstances similar to Grievant's travel to King City.

Grievant traveled to King City on 193 days in 2003, 2004, and 2005. She should receive mileage reimbursement and paid time for this travel.

23

25

F. POSITION OF THE EMPLOYER

There is no prohibition of a "split" duty assignment in the Agreement.

Grievant's assignment during this period of time was not a "split" assignment, as her work location is, by practice, wherever her assigned judge is located.

The Travel Policy requires that the employee be traveling on employer business. Here, Grievant was simply commuting to work.

Grievant's assignment in King City was not temporary, as it lasted 20 months.

Deputy Stewart's situation is distinguishable because he was required to change work locations during the work day, to be with his assigned court commissioner.

The AT&T grievance settlement is not precedent for this case. Deputies volunteered for this assignment, and the grievance was settled by providing them additional minutes to procure patrol cars for this assignment.

The Special Operations grievance was a dispute over when deputies went "on the clock," not a question of split duty assignment.

Granting the grievance would impose unreasonable and illogical burdens on the department.

The fact that Grievant prefers to leave her weapon in her locker at the Salinas courthouse, rather than take her gear home and use a gun lock or put it in the locking gun cabinet at her home, does not convert her commute to work time.

The grievance did not request, nor was it discussed during the grievance process, that an overtime claim was involved. Grievant can not now raise that claim.

G. OPINION

In this case of contract interpretation, the Union bears the burden of going forward and the burden of persuasion with respect to its claim that the Employer violated the Agreement. This Arbitrator uses the term "burden of going forward" for a specific purpose. That purpose is simply to emphasize for the parties that the Arbitrator expects to receive the evidence that both parties decide to present and then determine what the evidence proves, regardless of the source of the evidence. It is only if there is insufficient evidence on an issue that the party with the "burden" is prejudiced. The "burden of persuasion" means, to this Arbitrator, that if the evidence as a whole fails to establish the contractual right urged by the Union, the grievance will be denied.

Here, both parties raised a number of issues and provided evidence on various circumstances attempting to persuade the Arbitrator to accept their position. As discussed below, some of the issues and evidence do not seem to provide assistance in the interpretation of the contract issue here. Also, on the whole, the evidence fails to persuade the Arbitrator that under the circumstances here, the Grievant is entitled to the mileage reimbursement and the travel time sought. Therefore, the grievance will be denied.

Both parties provided evidence and argument on the issue of Grievant's "Main or Regular Place of Work." The Arbitrator is not persuaded by either party's arguments here, for the simple reason that the evidence in this record does not establish that this provision of the Employer's Travel Policy has any effect on Grievant's claim. The Arbitrator has carefully reviewed the documentary evidence and the testimony, and cannot determine any basis for the argument that the Grievant's main or regular place of work here provides support for her claim to mileage and travel time. While the Arbitrator does not accept the Employer's argument that Grievant's "main" place of work during the relevant time period was King City, the Union's argument that her main location was Salinas does not help her because the policy in question specifically addresses the issue and clearly requires that mileage from the main place of work is reimbursable only if the Grievant was required to report to her main place work before traveling.⁷ Though the Union argues that Grievant was "required" to report to Salinas, the Arbitrator determines, as argued by the Employer, that Grievant chose to go to Salinas before traveling to King City. Grievant is not faulted for her decision, but her decision was based upon her personal preference and not any Employer requirement.

The Union also argues that an Employee can have only one main or regular place of work. This position is then used to argue that a "split" assignment is prohibited. Again, the Arbitrator finds no support for that position in the record here. After careful review of the evidence presented and the documents submitted, the Arbitrator does not find any provision of the Collective Bargaining Agreement or the Employer's policies which establishes a prohibition on assignment such as Grievant had in this case.

The evidence that district attorneys are provided a county vehicle for travel and that public defenders are provided mileage is not persuasive. The Arbitrator does not accept the Employer's argument that these personnel are in different bargaining units and are professional employee as valid distinctions, because, as argued by the Union, the same policy applies to these employees, and that policy provides no basis for the distinctions argued by the Employer. However, the evidence is insufficient concerning the public defenders, and the Arbitrator would require much more solid evidence upon which to agree with the Union's argument. As to the district attorneys, the evidence is in conflict, and the Union provided no rebuttal to the Employer evidence that district attorneys are required to report to Salinas before traveling to King City. Thus, it appears that the treatment of the district attorneys meets the requirement of County Travel Policy section V.B.2.a)(5).

Similarly, the evidence introduced to show a past practice is insufficient to support the Union's position.

- Deputy Stewart's travel was during the work day, when he was required to report to one courthouse, then was required to travel to another courthouse during his workday. He was entitled to reimbursement for this schedule. When this travel was no longer required, his entitlement ceased. This does not support the Union's position.
- 2. The AT&T grievance, according to all the evidence in this record, concerned the fact that the Employer had not paid the deputies for all time worked. Review of the documents submitted concerning this grievance, UN EX 10, supports this conclusion. The issue there was very different from the Grievant's situation.
- 3. The Special Enforcement Unit's grievance, from the evidence here, establishes that the deputies reported to one station and were assigned to go to another, or where the required 10 days notice was not provided. As Sergeant Dahmen testified, if they had received 10 days notice, there would be no basis for the grievance. They were paid for time "on the clock" beginning with their arrival at work at the station assigned.

Though not necessary to the decision here, the Arbitrator does note that the Employer's argument that Grievant's travel time claim may not be considered because
